Laurentian Crippled by Snowstorm

Voyagers Persevere

While the snow came down by the truck load and the wind howled at the door the always faithful and studious Voyagers could be seen trudging to their classes.

"Every place in the city is closed," they said, "All except Laurentian University. We are of course the Voyagers. It don't matter how much snow comes down. We can make it through no matter what."

In the true spirit of the hardy Voyager, the staff at Laurentians student Newspaper were also hard at work. They all huddled around the old Franklin fire place in their log cabin at G1, Students street.

"The paper must go out!" Cried the editor. They all knew it too. By the dim light of a single kerosene lamp they worked on into the night. The snow could have piled up against the door so high that they would have had to go through the stove pipe hole to get outside. It could have piled up so high that no one would be able to find any of them until spring. That didn't matter. The paper had to get out and they would continue on until it was finished.

At times the hardship was almost unbearable. The smoke from the fire place would make the screens of their trusty Macintosh barely visible. The wood supply started getting low and a few less hardy soles were ready to throw the paper from the laser printer into the fire for warmth.

"Don't worry," said the editor as she hefted her double-sided axe onto her shoulder. "I'll find us the wood to keep us warm. The paper must go out." And with that Tricialynn put on her touque, and dressed in her checkered flannel shirt, worn out jeans and steel toe boots she ventured out into the storm. While away the staff worked on with renewed hope.

When she returned she was quite a sight to behold. Snow stuck to her eyebrows and her three days growth of beard gave her quite a sinister look but all were kept warm as they worked into the night. Finally when all the work was done for the week and the paper of the Voyagers was ready to go to the printers the hardy staff went off to the pub content in the knowledge that they had persevered like a true Voyager.

EDUCATIONAL FORUM ON NATIVE NATIONHOOD

An Educational Forum on Native Nationhood will be presented in order to provide students and professors the opportunity to become more fully informed about the debate which has been sparked over native self-government. The participants to this forum will be:

JAMES DUMONT, a professor in the Native Studies Department of the University of Sudbury, will paint a picture of the relationships between the European settlers and the natives since the beginning of the colonization period. He will speak about historical perspectives which are often overlooked in the 'white' history books.

MURIELLE BEDARD, Vice-President of the Alliance Autochtone du Québec, will discuss several of the most important native self-government and land claims disputes in Québec.

DONNA GOODLEAF, a member of the Long House in Kanawake, will inform us about the political aspects of the Iroquois Confederation of the Mohawks.

BOB WATT, speaker from the Union of Ontario Indians, North Bay, will outline the status of native self-government in Ontario as well as more specific information about the politics and territories in dispute.

The EDUCATIONAL FORUM will take place on the 14th of November, at 1:30 p.m., in the Fraser Auditorium.

The Search for a President . . .

The search for a President for the University began a year ago, with the resignation of Dr. Daniel, on October 30, 1989. That search is rapidly coming to a head.

The Laurentian University Board of Governors elected the following people for the Search Committee: Mr. Normand Forest, Dr. Roberto Grosso, Mrs. Karen Shaw and Chairman Mr. Alan Quarney.

The University Senate named the following: Dr. Wes Cragg, Dr. Les Davison, Dr. Angus Gilbert, Dr. David Gillingham and Mr. Conrad Messier. On April 19, 1990, Dr. Gillingham could no longer serve on the committee, and was replaced by Professor Wendy Gerhard.

With the establishment of the Search Committee, came an outline of minimum criteria in evaluating potential candidates, which are as follows:

- strong academic background in teaching and research
- proven administration ability at a senior level

- demonstrated ability to work with faculty and students in a committee system
- demonstrated ability to represent the University with external groups, such as The Ministry, The Council on University Affairs
- Integral bilingualism

In addition, the Executive Committee of The Board of Governors, was to provide the search committee with "an outline of the broad objectives of the University."

The search committee hired a consultant firm, Stoneham and Associates, to assist in the process.

In the beginning, the committee received sixty-four initial applications for the position of President, which can be categorized as follows:

- 8 College/University Presidents and Principals
- 20 Deans
- 9 Professors
- 3 Non-University Administrators
- 15 University Vice-Presidents

- 5 University Administrators (other)

• 64 = Total

the initial list included ten females.

After direct contact by the committee, sixteen agreed to interviews, which can be broken down as follows:

- 2 College/University Presidents and Principals
- 6 Deans
- 3 Professors
- 1 Non-University Administrator
- 3 University Vice-Presidents
- 1 University Administrator

• 16 = Total

By July 30th, 1990, a total of five candidates were granted a two hour interview, off campus, while a special effort was made to locate more potential candidates.

The process led to a second interview with one individual, but before the second interview, the sole candidate declined his application.

The committee reviewed its position and reluctantly reported that not one candidate met the 70% support of the committee. A proposition to lower the standards of potential candidates was rejected.

A wide spectrum of groups affiliated to the University were consulted prior to the consideration of the minimum criteria.

With the process so near its deadline of December 31st, 1990, SGA President Marc Venio cannot see the committee finding a permanent replacement for Dr. Bélanger.

KAR COLUMN Part I: Emissions

By : Izzy Tuhon

A few weeks ago, there was an environmental quiz on David Suzuki's show. The issue of urban pollution came up, and with it, the fact that vehicles are the major source of oxides of nitrogen and hydrocarbon pollution. This is ironic because both of these pollutants are the by-products of faulty combustion and shouldn't be there at all, if the engine is working properly. Under ideal conditions internal combustion should produce, as its end-products, only carbon dioxide and water. While it's impossible in real life to eliminate all unwanted emissions, the advent of fuel injection has made fuel metering more accurate and engines more efficient and economical. The mandatory presence of emission controls on all newer vehicles has also greatly contributed to cleaner exhaust fumes with minimal effects on engine performance. I strongly discourage the removal of emission control devices not only because it's illegal but also because they are an effective way in which we can all contribute to a cleaner environment. Emission control system checks should be an important part of every tune-up. (More about this in forthcoming issues.)

There are three major types of unwanted, polluting emissions:

- oxides of nitrogen
- carbon monoxide, and
- hydrocarbons.

Oxides of nitrogen, frequently abbreviated to NO_x, are formed at excessively high combustion pressures and temperatures and with excessively lean fuel/air mixtures (not enough fuel). In this case, oxygen combines with the normally chemically unreactive nitrogen present in the air, instead of with carbon from the hydrocarbons in the fuel.

Both hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide (CO) emissions result from not enough air in the air/fuel mixture that enters the cylinder combustion chambers. Carbon monoxide is the poisonous gas that kills people who run their cars in unventilated garages. It does this by displacing oxygen from hemoglobin, the body's oxygen carrier molecule. At 70% displacement, you die from oxygen starvation. CO is formed when, due to insufficient oxygen, carbon from the fuel combines with one oxygen atom instead of two. Hydrocarbon emission usually simply refers to unburnt fuel, and therefore your gas money, coming out your tailpipe as black, sooty smoke. It is the result of severe oxygen deprivation. Hydrocarbon emissions will also be high if one or more spark plugs are misfiring or if the emission controls aren't working properly.

Lack of oxygen can be due to several causes, including:

- dirty/clogged air filter which restricts air-flow to the engine
- poorly adjusted idle mixture on the carburetor
- choke problems, and
- thermac malfunction.

The choke is a butterfly valve located in the carburetor which blocks off part of the air-flow to the engine, creating a more concentrated or "richer" fuel/air mixture necessary to start the engine. Once the engine is running, progressively leaner mixtures are required. Choke problems are usually the result of improper linkage adjustment or pull-off problems. The most common of these is the malfunction vacuum pull-off. All it is, is a diaphragm assembly which is mechanically attached to the choke on one side, and by a vacuum hose, to the manifold end (bottom) of the carburetor on the other. When the engine starts and vacuum is created by the pistons going down in the cylinders, the diaphragm moves and places the choke in a more open position to allow more air-flow into the carburetor. When this diaphragm leaks or otherwise fails to work the choke stays in the closed position restricting air-flow to the engine.

The thermac is a temperature controlled valve unit in the air cleaner housing body. When the engine is cold, the thermac valve closes off the main air intake, allowing air to come in only through a pipe located by the exhaust. The exhaust manifold heats up very quickly and warms the air going to the carburetor. The maximum air-flow through this route, however, is much less than through the main air intake. If the valve doesn't open up when the engine is warm, there will be insufficient air-flow to the carburetor at engine speeds, higher than idle.

The idle mixture screw(s) on the carburetor, meter(s) the amount of fuel that goes into the engine when idling. If the setting isn't right and too much or too little fuel is going in, idling problems will result.

Carburetor problems only occur in cars which have carburetors (makes sense . . .). Between 1980 and 1985, most car manufacturers began changing over to fuel injection, a much more precise system. Your owner's manual will tell you which system your car uses. Feel free to read it for other info: it will tell you the engine type (V6, V8, in-line), the engine displacement or capacity (in cubic inches or litres), the type of drive train you have (front, rear, or four wheel drive - if it's the latter, whether it's full-time or part-time; full-time 4WD uses a lot more gas but it's great for winter driving). It will also tell you the options your car has, such as power steering for example. Your owner's manual will also provide a schedule for preventative maintenance such as oil/filter changes, fuel filter changes, spark plug and PCV valve changes, etc.

THE TIME YOU TAKE TO FAMILIARIZE YOURSELF WITH YOUR OWNER'S MANUAL WILL GO ALONG WAY TO SAVE YOU AGGREGATION IN THE FUTURE.

Memo

To: Everyone
From: SGA Executive

Please be advised that the Canada Employment Center on campus will be closing April 31 as it presently stands. Consequently, there will be no CEC services nor recruitment of employers on campus. The SGA is presently lobbying federal MPs and the officials of the CEC for a three year extension to permit a transitional period.

The SGA needs the assistance of LU faculty administration and student body in our efforts to achieve this extension.

The SGA is holding a general meeting (Nov. 13 @ 1:00 pm Great Hall), concerning the eminent death of the CEC on campus, in order to inform students of lost valuable services and rights.

Your Attendance alone can Help save the Canada Employment Centre on Campus.

Students and the GST Credit

As part of the government's proposal for the Goods and Services Tax (GST), a credit will be paid every three months to Canadians with low and modest incomes to offset part or all of the tax.

Most students aged 19 or over are eligible to receive the quarterly GST Credit cheques. Students under 19 are also eligible if they are married or are parents.

Individuals may not realize that they are eligible and may not have applied for the credit. Some have little or no income and didn't bother to file a tax return (or the green GST Credit application form) last spring. Revenue Canada Taxation needs both forms to calculate the credit.

It's not too late to apply for the credit. Individuals can still qualify for the full credit, even if their application is not received in time for the initial payment, which is scheduled to be made in December 1990 in advance of the introduction of the GST on January 1, 1991.

The basic annual credit has been set at $190 and the child credit at $100. Single adults, including single parents, are eligible for an additional credit of up to $100. This means that

- a single student aged 19 or over will be eligible for a full annual credit of $190 (if a student earned more than $6,000 in 1989, that individual may be entitled to an additional credit of up to $100, for a total of $290);

Single parents will also be entitled to a full adult credit of $190 for one dependant child. The total credit payable is reduced by five per cent of family income over $24,355. Family income does not include parents' income even if the student lives at home.

- a single parent with one child, or married students with one child, qualify for GST credits of up to $480.

Tax returns and GST Credit application forms are available from district taxation offices.

Additional information about the Goods and Services Tax Credit is available 24 hours a day by calling the following toll-free numbers:

- 1-800-267-6999 if you have a push button (Tone signalling phone and "Touch-Tone" (TM) service),
- 1-800-267-5656 if you have any other type of phone.

The following table shows some examples of the annual GST Credit at various income levels:

	Single, no children	Single, one child	Couple, one child
	(in dollars)
Net Income	Credit	Credit	Credit
up to 6,000	190	380	480
8,000	229	419	480
10,000	267	458	480
12,000	290	480	480
14,000	290	480	480
18,000	290	480	480

Savagery and Civilization:

The events at Kahnawake in Quebec which marked the summer of 1990 will have important repercussions for the social and political life of Canada at several levels. These developments which emerged from the wake of the failure of the Meech Lake Accord make us aware of the massive frustration on the part of natives. These feelings stem from unsettled land claims and even more fundamental claims to political self-government beginning with the recognition of the sovereignty of the First Nations. Moreover, these events seem to have stirred and intensified a sense of solidarity among the First Nations which had gone unrecognized by non-natives until now. There appears to be a national consensus developing that the question of native self-government needs to be resolved.

These events have shown the near universal lack of knowledge among Canadians, professors and students included, about the living conditions of the Natives, their spiritual state, the level of their frustrations and the nature of their land claims. These events have also revealed the existence of a certain level of racism (as always, founded on lack of information) toward the First Nations' peoples.

At this point, we must question what we have been taught and be willing to relearn history. At the base of our beliefs about the origins of "white" history is the notion that America did not exist until Christopher Columbus, Amerigo Vespucci, John Cabot or Jacques Cartier discovered it on behalf of European interests. Thereafter, these lands were considered to be a new work opened up to the exploitation and accumulation of wealth of those who followed. They were seen as a paradise for those fleeing persecution from European civilization. In effect, the Europeans did not discover America; they conquered it along with its inhabitants and their culture while, ironically, America was becoming a symbol of freedom and opportunity for white settlers and the Natives were considered to be "savages".

A good historical atlas would show us that the Natives have been

By What Criteria?

inhabitants of this continent for thousands of years, for anywhere from 35,000 to 70,000 years according to various sources. Archaeological exploration shows the presence of Natives around Lac-St-Louis and the lower shore of the St. Lawrence for about 8000 years. As for the number of settlers, there again these figures depend on the source, but can be estimated to have stood at between 70 and 100 million during the 16th century. At Hochelaga, on the Island of Montreal, Cartier talked of an Iroquois fortified village surrounded by wheat fields and comprised of 50 long houses with about 1,500 inhabitants. At Stadocona, near Quebec, the village population totalled 600 persons. The Iroquois Confederation and the Hurons each had populations of about 20,000.

The Natives know of applications for 1,000 plants, the properties of which they used for medicine and food. They were engaged in commerce, using a network of trails, rivers and their tributaries, to obtain goods from neighboring villages and those as far away as one thousand kilometers. It is equally important to underline the pervasive operation of the rules of gift-giving which Marcel Mauss, in his famous book Sociology and Anthropology, has described as the underpinning of social relationships among natives. A Jesuit of the seventeenth century observed that, "You see here in the first place a great love and togetherness that they are careful to cultivate through their marriages, in the gifts, their banquets and their frequent visiting. After having returned from fishing, hunting and trading they always divided what they have obtained among themselves; if they have obtained anything in abundance or have bought or been given anything, they regale the entire village with it. Their hospitality towards all kinds of strangers is remarkable".

These very flattering remarks about the Native way of life should make us reflect on the fate that we have reserved for our hosts. In many ways their living conditions resemble those which the white civilization has relegated to all aboriginal peoples throughout the world, from the Americas, to Australia and South Africa.

It is high time to face our general ignorance towards these peoples who have inhabited these lands long before us, and confront our lack of knowledge about their cultural traits, their unique economic organizations and their characteristic forms of social and political organization (such as the existence among the Iroquois of a form of democracy, founded on consensus, which has been in place long before the arrival of the Europeans). Only then can we begin to learn from them the important understandings about their way of life and appreciate their respect for the land, for life, and for each other. Considering the violent course of Canadian politics over the past several centuries, perhaps we could begin to understand that to be considered "savage" is a quality which is entirely relative and could well be applied to our way of relating to the environment, life and others around us.

GST Debate on Campus

The Goods and Services Tax, while unpopular, is in the best interest of the Canadian economy. This was the proposition put forth for a debate held by the Department of Economics and the Economics Students Association on the 30th of October, 1990. For the Affirmative was Dr. David Robinson, Dr. Akhter Faroque and forth year student, Mr. Gordon Olivant. For the opposed was Dr. D. Sakellariou, Dr. K.V. Nagarajan and forth year student F.J. Gawlina. Given the nature of the topic for discussion and the background of the speakers, the debate promised to be informative as well as entertaining. The debate consisted of 5 minute speeches by the speakers, alternating between the affirmative and the opposed, followed by a general discussion from the audience.

The speakers for the affirmative started with Dr. David Robinson. He described himself as the only person in the room who seriously considered joining the communist party. His reasons for supporting the GST was that it was a non-distortionary tax and was far more efficient than the Manufactures Sales tax that it is replacing. He also stated that the tax was not broad enough and should be extended to include basic groceries. Also in favor of the new tax was Dr. Akhter Faroque who conceded that the tax had both positive and aspects to it but that it should be judged on its overall effect. He said that while the tax would have a negative effect on inflation and income equity it would have a positive effect on Canadian competitiveness, future growth, and the allocation of resources. In his opinion the overall effect would be positive. The final speaker for the affirmative was forth year student, Gordon Olivant. He argued that the tax was absolutely necessary because Canada's national debt was out of control and that it must be attended to. He warned that ignoring the debt will lead to financial ruin.

The speakers for the opposed started with Dr. D. Sakellariou who argued that a value added tax does have an advantage over income tax because of its simplicity, but that the proposed GST is very complicated. He said that it will hit small business located close to the US, the poor, and young people, the hardest. Dr. Nagarajan argued that the tax is not non-distortionary. Canada's tax system is already distortionary and the GST will not change that but will instead lead to higher inflation which will cause the bank of Canada to increase interest rates and thereby push Canada further into recession. Finally, forth year student, F.J. Gawlina argued that Canadian manufactures are hurt far more by high interest rates and a high dollar than by the old manufactures sales tax. He argues that if Canada lowers interest rates then that will decrease the interest payments on the debt and will decrease the size of the debt. The inflationary pressure caused by the GST will lead to higher interest rates and will increase the size of the debt, not decrease it.

Once the scheduled speakers were finished the debate was opened up to the floor. There were some interesting discussions all around. It was obvious that the opinions vary greatly here on campus in regards to the GST and hopefully there will be more discussions like this last one in the near future.

STROKER'S BOX

Well, how about them Toronto Maple Leafs. They gotta play tree periods of hockey.

Hey guys, how about that bath? How about Venus Delite? Maybe she should have called herself Penis Delite. I guess it is a safe bet to say that the gentlemen of U. of S. experienced a delightful and overall uprisng good time at the annual "Study Session" party. And where does the stripper get the right to come on our bus and demand her bra back. Finders keepers, strippers weepers is how the saying goes, I think. From what I saw, she should have kept her over-the-shoulder-peanut-holder on her body. But it will make quite the conversation piece in someone's room. Also, there was a full moon out that night, right Woody! Even with your full moon Woody, the size of your butt prevented any chances of a total eclipse.

On the women's side, "Study Session" got off to a sour note when the bus failed to pick them up. Despite vicious rumors that the gentlemen paid the bus driver not to pick them up, it was said by many women that a great time was had by all, no matter where you were. An interesting race has developed after this past Friday night. Paula has entered the race against Lisette for the title of Miss UP-CHUCK of 1990/91.

As promised in last week's article, in David Letterman style, here are the top 10 stories as to how I received the scar on my face :

10. A metal plate has been placed in my head after I received a near fatal injury in Vietnam.

9. I cut myself shaving my entire face.

8. I was hit by a runaway pool cue during a pool room brawl.

7. I hacked myself with a knife, as it is a requirement to have a 10 inch scar across your face to enter into I Wanna Be A Security Guard School.

6. While sleeping in the T.V. room, I was beaten by evil girl guides bearing boxes of cookies. During the struggle, one box of cookies was hurled threw the air and popped me in the pumpkin.

5. I slipped while in the shower reaching for the soap and smashed my face on the faucet. I have been haunted by this incident and therefore have never showered since.

4. When I was younger, I was so short that I could play handball against the curb. During a killer match against my mother, she let a blast fly that caught me off guard catching me in the forehead, knocking me out. As soon as I hit the road, a passer-by on a bike, ran over my face.

3. Many years ago in the beginning days of U. of S., one night, I sneaked outside to the Hockey rink, sporting some lovely figure skates. While practicing my triple axel, I caught my skate on a crack in the ice, throwing me 20 feet in the air, landing on the ice doing the splits. With the impact of the fall, my head fell forward hitting my skate blade causing the scar.

2. As written about by the Valley Boyz, with my shrivelled up willy, I was reading the Lambda of a few weeks ago during a special moment, to see how to put on a condom, when I received the worst paper cut ever seen. I was trying to read the blacked out portions of the article because the instructions were not clear.

And finally, the #1 story:

1. Father Ron clocked me a good one for trying to steal his lovely red kamono.

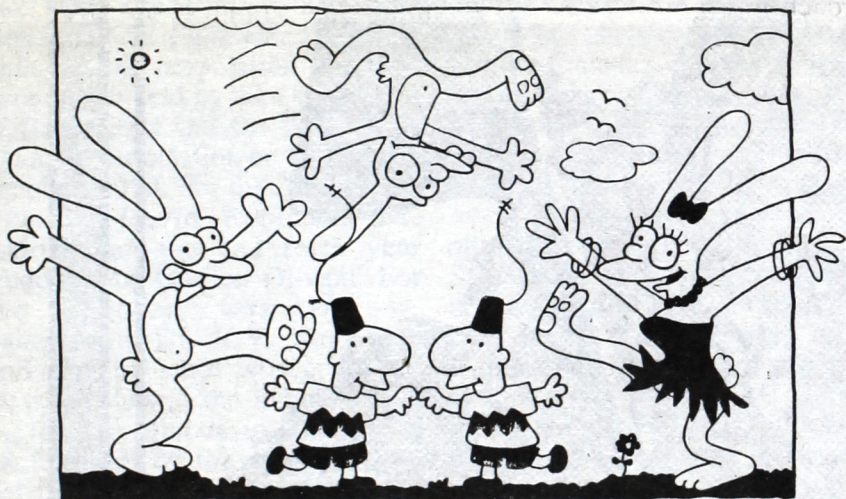

To finish the article, I would like to say that I will be changing the name from STROKER'S BOX to MOE'S WORLD. Why you ask? Why not? I got bored of the title STROKER'S BOX. I also want to see my name in the paper as often as possible. See ya next time when you tune into MOE'S WORLD.

SINGULARLY ABSURD, UNIQUELY FUNNY!

The ridiculous mishaps that befall three married couples at three successive Christmas eve parties, are the main ingredients of ABSURD PERSON SINGULAR, Alan Ayckbourn's uproarious comedy hit, opening at the Sudbury Theatre Centre November 15th, and running until December 2nd, 1990, generously sponsored by Air Ontario.

It was Ayckbourn's belief that the best part of every party happens in the kitchen and so the first play is being held in the modern, gadget-filled kitchen of Sidney and Jane Hopcroft who are jittery with anxiety at the prospect of entertaining their betters. This nervous couple will be played by BRYAN FOSTER and TI HALLAS. Both will be remembered for their performances last season on the STC stage - Mr. Foster in the FANTASTICKS and Ms. Hallas in DUET FOR ONE, THE NIGHT OF THE IGUANA and BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS.

Party number two takes place in the neglected and untidy flat of Geoffrey and Eva Jackson. Although still unprepared, Eva listens while her philandering husband announces that he means to move in with another woman. She then sets about committing suicide, only to be continuously interrupted by guests who get in her way. DON CARRIER and ALISON MacLEOD will play this couple whose marriage is rapidly going to pieces. Mr. Carrier was last seen in LITTLE WOMEN in 1986 and Ms. MacLeod last appeared in WAITING FOR THE PARADE in 1984.

The third party takes place in the large, slightly modernized, Victorian-style kitchen of Ronald and Marion Brewster-Wright. RICHARD THORNTON and WENNA SHAW will play this rich, socially-established couple, distinguished by dullness on his side and snobbery on hers. Mr. Thornton appeared last season in BETRAYAL and Ms. Shaw was last seen here in THE MOUSETRAP in 1975.

LARRY AUBREY who last season appeared in THE FANTASTICKS and is Director of the Sudbury Theatre Centre Touring Company will be directing this staggeringly funny, knee-slapping comedy hit that won the London Evening Standard Award for Best Comedy of the Year.

GWEN KEATLEY who recently designed the settings and costumes for STC's FIDDLER ON THE ROOF will design the costumes and the three contrasting kitchens representing the personalities of their owners. The technical aspects of ABSURD PERSON SINGULAR will once again fall into the capable hands of SIMON DAY, (Production Manager/Lighting Designer); GLORIA DAY, (Stage Manager); ROBERT KRAUSE, (Technical Director) and their support staff.

Don't be an absurdly singular person and miss this brilliant comedy of domestic misadventure. Tickets can be reserved with your VISA or American Express card by calling the STC Box Office at 674-8381.

Book Review : In The Minds of Men by : Ian T. Taylor

Ian Taylor, a Toronto-based writer and researcher, formerly a research metallurgist and documentary film producer, has written a thought-provoking book which I, as a science ignoramus, was surprised to find very interesting. His style is so clear that, although there is enough information in this book to satisfy the most scholarly scientist, it is understandable to someone with little knowledge of the field.

The book's subtitle is "Darwin and the New World Order", and its main premise is that the theory of evolution and its full-scale acceptance by the science establishment of the world has affected not only the scientific but the social development of our society. As Taylor states in his introduction, "our personal thinking and approach to life are crucially dependent on whichever of the two opposed belief systems we choose to adopt", those opposed systems being humanistic evolution and divine creation.

In The Minds of Men is nothing if not thorough. It starts with the ancient Egyptian and Greek beliefs about the origin of the world and of man, and continues through a discussion of the early men of science, through Darwin, the "missing link" discoveries, the discussion on the age of the earth, and the effect on our society produced by the revolution in the thoughts and underlying philosophy of life which resulted from the propagation of Darwin's theory. The book is copiously footnoted and cross-referenced, and contains appendices for scholarly readers and many illustrations for those of us who like our science watered down.

For a generation of readers who have grown up in an educational system which encouraged them to question and not blindly accept ideas which are presented to them, it makes sense that an alternative to the theory of evolution should be considered. There is no better way to investigate this alternative than through this book, which presents its case in a clear and orderly style, covering all facets of the controversy.

Ian Taylor will be speaking and answering questions from the public in the Great Hall on Friday, November 16th, between 12 noon and 1:30pm. Anyone interested in acquiring a copy of his book can do so there. Attend with an open mind, and prepare to be stimulated if not convinced.

VALLEY BOYZ Facts & Adventures

Prediction:...watch for Mulroney to apologize to the jews on behalf of the Nazis..

Rumour:...Harold Ballard will come back to life & so will the Leafs...(maybe!!!)

Prediction:... seriously now, the disco ball in the Great Hall is hangin by a thread, so be careful...

'The valley boyz dedicate this to a fellow Valley Girl'

My mother always told me never to let the milk sit or it'll turn sour. Being rather intelligent as a kid, I deduced that if I let it sit long enough, it would turn to cheese. My father however, having gone through childhood himself and now always on step ahead of me, approached me when mom wasn't around: "Son", he said, "you have to stir it and work at it for it to turn to cheese." To this day I don't know what the hell he was trying to tell me but I've never forgotten it.

The Wild Thing

Now, it has come to the Valley Boyz attention that many of you guys out there are trying ever so hard to score with a fellow Valley girl of ours. Sorry BOZZOS! If you can't commit, you can't hit! Now we're not telling you to get lost or anything. On the contrary, we're happy she's getting this attention, but if you guys don't give her the right king of attention, you're just wasting your time. Being a Valley Girl, she's not that easy to get. Let us, the Valley Boyz, give you a few pointers.

First of all guys, no gushy kisses or long kisses. Germs are spread mouth to mouth. Second, no "short" jokes! she CAN get into her bunk by herself. Thirdly, no staring unless it's at her eyes and only if you thing you have nice eyes yourself. Furthermore, if you do get her attention this way, have the guts not to look away as soon as she notices.

Most importantly, don't give her the macho, super-charming LET-ME-GET-THE-DOOR-FOR-YOU or LET-ME-GET-THIS-AND-THAT-FOR-YOU image. Just be yourself and try to be humourous. Do stupid funny stuff but don't go over the limit. For example, if you have a small penis, DON'T show it to her. It'll just get smaller. Now there are many other things you should know about Valley Girlz but it wouldn't be fair or much of a challenge if we told you everything.

Hopefully you guys know who you are 'cuz if you don't, well that's your problem. Oh yeah, one more thing, smarten up HARDBODY, she's just a girl, but more. Don't let that blonde get away, she's a once in a lifetime, dude; unless of course you're a Valley Boy, in which case you wouldn't have a problem with any woman.

Well that's it for us, we're outta here. By the way, if you other guys want pointers on how to pick up any other girls, drop us a letter at Lambda with your questions. Anyhow, just remember, time only stands still for us. Why? Cuz we're the VALLEY BOYZ!!

DEAR JILLIAN

respond to your letter, next edition. Keep reading, and keep writing.

Dear Jillian,

Well, she still insists on being rude to me and one of my closest friends. She won't even say "Hello" to me anymore. I don't know if she is trying to hurt me or if she just doesn't know what to do! But, she isn't hurting me, she is only making me mad. I care for her inside me still, but I wish she would say something to me. The other night, for instance, she was really drunk at the PUB and enjoying herself. Okay, no problem! But when she left with a geek of a guy, yes, I was upset. I called her roommate later, to find out if she was home yet, and she wasn't. Only fifteen minutes had passed since I had seen her leave and the call to her place. I just wanted to make sure that she was alright. I know she's a big girl, but shit, there are feelings inside me still too. Anyways, how do I go about getting her to say something to me?

Still Sorry

Dear Still Sorry,

I think it is time you talked to her seriously, but don't expect alot, sometimes it takes time before a relationship can get back to the friendship stage again.

Keep in touch and tell me what happens.

Dear Jillian,

Well guess what? She went away this weekend. Do you know how lonely I felt? Well, while she was away, she and her girlfriend were out window shopping and guess what she did? Wrong, she didn't buy any jeans!! She bought a ring. And do you know who it was for? I'm not sure what I'm going to do now! She almost made me choke on it. I'm getting really curious on what her intentions are for the near and not so near future! Please help me once again!

Scared

Dear Scared,

Sounds like she had an awesome time wherever she went, but it also sounds like she missed you a hell of a lot. I think you two should get together for a very serious talk about each others intentions for the future. It seems to me that those intentions may be a lot more alike than you are willing to admit.

P.S.- Tell her to "Get that pole outta my face!" HEE HEE OOPS, Private Joke.

Dear Jillian,

I'm worried that I might be a transitional (rebound) babe. And, I really, really don't want that!

Help

Dear Help,

I have been telling a lot of you to talk about the things you are worried about and that's because communication is the key to a healthy lasting relationship. My advice is to take it really slow with him and make sure you aren't just a transitional luge type babe. Be careful! Good luck and I want to know what happens.

Jillian

Dear Jillian,

I read your advice in the last edition of Lambda and I wasn't very impressed. I stated in my last letter that I was "turned on by cows" not that I was "sexually interested" in cows as you suggest. If however, (and this purely hypothetical) I was sexually interested in cows, I'm not anymore. Now, I'm kind of attracted to sheep. I think Daisy was getting a little too serious for me and I decided to break things up before I really hurt her. I did some research and found out that this "beastiality" past-time you speak of is very common-place at the University of Guelph. Do you think that I should look into a transfer? How may I get a hold of Nymphomate? Can you recheck the letter and see if her roommate was "moaning" or "mooing".

Artsy Frosh

Dear Artsy Frosh,

I am sorry for jumping to conclusions. But, I think my suspicions were confirmed by your last letter!! Daisy will be okay in time. It's you I am worried about! Maybe you should transfer to Guelph, I hear their agriculture club is really into sheep! As for Nymphomate, hopefully she will

RADIO PROPAGANDA

CFLR's TOP 24 for OCTOBER

REVIEW

by Mephisto SUICIDAL TENDENCIES Lights, Camera, Revolution This ten track CD contains Suicidal's best songs ever. Their first release (You Can't Bring Me Down) deals with the PMRC cutting down Mike Muirs lyrics. Considering that this is their fifth release, they have progressed musically and lyrically since their debut as a skateboard/thrash/progressive heavy metal band. If you're looking for something different, give it a shot.

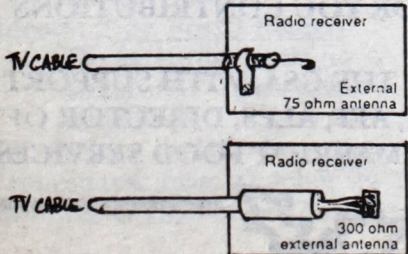

WORDS

The best way to support a radio station is by listening to it. We're not desperate for listeners, but we would like to hear students tuning in. Most of our listeners seem to be people from the surrounding community, rather than from the University. We would like to see people from our school supporting us, because we offer something different than any other radio station in Sudbury. Be proud of CFLR, tune in sometime. It's 106.7 cable FM. Be daring. Experience a whole new world.

CABLE FM ?

CFLR Radio, and many other Cable FM [CAFM] signals can be heard by Northern Cable subscribers on just about any radio receiver. Simply disconnect your cable from your television and connect it as shown in the diagram. If you wish to have both a television and a Radio connected simultaneously, this will cost you a few dollars more on your cable subscription. Call Northern Cable at 560-1560 for more info or call us at ext. 2405.

Cooperations: A true Alternative

Cooperatives are an alternative to private enterprise. It is important to note that cooperations exist that they are real and they are important, even to a student. A question arises, How can students incorporate the collective mentality of a cooperation within campus life?

Well, there are many avenues that one can take. In a lecture, given in a second year cooperative studies course, guest speaker David Madigan (Development Consultant for Northern Non Profit Housing) said that "Cooperative housing is the best alternative".

In 1898, the SGA approached Mr. Madigan to look into the development of a cooperative residence on campus. Unfortunately, due to the teacher's strike and other difficulties, time ran out and the project never got off the ground. However, the cooperative formula can still be utilized, here, on campus.

Students, as a mass, have power. If a group of students would get together to form a cooperation (including a board of governors), this would give them a sense of unity, as well as the power of democratic decision making.

"Co-ops are not marginal and unimportant, in fact it is an international movement" says Ginette Lafrenière, a professor of Cooperative studies of the School of Commerce. Did you know that over 10 million Canadians are members of a cooperative enterprise? A cooperative enterprise is made up of 6 elements. They are:

- 1) A free and voluntary choice
- 2) The insurance that everyone involved in a cooperation has one vote.
- 3) Interest on the capital
- 4) Rebate
- 5) Education
- 6) Intercooperation

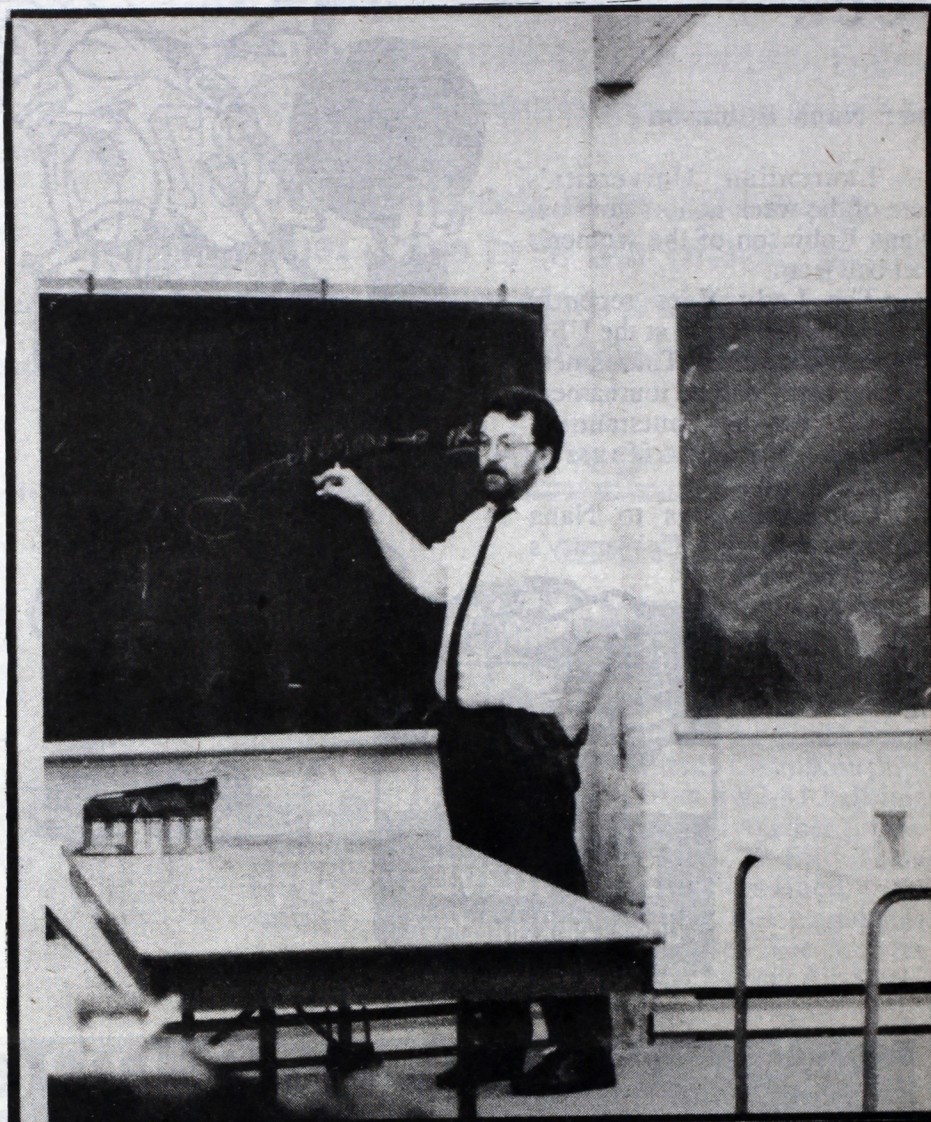

After the cooperative is formed and there is a free and voluntary commitment on the parts of its members, they can begin to assess the needs of the student population. For sake of argument, say that the needs assessment stated that there is a definite need for a weekend restaurant on campus. Instead of Marriot Foods, and American based company, running the restaurant, why not have a student cooperation do the management. in other words, why not have a group of students share job duties in order to service a need of it's population. The collective mentality and the sense of community that is involved in a cooperation can prove to be beneficial to the students involved and also to student life in general because it gives them a sense of belonging.

This ideology was first utilized by Alphose Desjardin in establishing the "Caisse Populaires" of Quebec. These "Credit Unions" proved to be a guiding force in the financial security of the province as well as fiscal benefits for small towns.

Another very real utilization of the cooperative formula would be to form a worker co-op. "Instead of working for minimum wage, for someone else, why don't students form a worker co-op where they can determine their own salary?" states Ginette Lafrenière. There are various grants available to start worker co-ops and all that is needed is a commitment on the students part. For more information please do not hesitate in contacting Ginette Lafrenière at extension 2130.

Another interesting facet of the cooperative formula would be the utilization on the international level. International cooperations have existed for a long time in Europe and are now slowly starting to appear across the world. In southern countries, the cooperative formula takes the form of investments for the realization of mega projects. In northern countries, the formula stands for unification. In other words, a mass of people grouped together to act upon a certain need of its population. In eastern countries, Laurentian University is under the cooperative formula is still in stages of development. This is due to peristrika or the shift from socialist governments to capitalist/democratic governments. Therefore, the future of cooperations lies in the dissociation of the state. In other words, the introduction of the cooperative formula is a direct function of governmental dissociation.

Mr. Brian Madigan talking about Cooperations

It has come to the attention of certain students that the cooperative studies program at Laurentian University is under attack by the administration. It is up to the students to fight for this program. It is one of the only cooperative programs in Canada and should be regarded as such. Therefore, this program is not only important to the community it services but also to the population of Canada. It is up to us to keep the cooperative studies program alive.

The Creation/ Evolution Controversy

The Laurentian University Navigators of Canada present; ORIGINS: How the World Came to Be -- A series of six powerful, wide-ranging 30-minute films, each dealing with separate important areas of the Creation/Evolution Controversy.

In their quest for truth about our planet's ancient and sometimes mysterious past, modern scientists come face-to-face with dramatic new evidences of the earth's true origins.

Video 1: The Origin of the Universe

Is the Universe too complex and well-designed to have originated by time and chance?

Video 2: The Earth a Young Planet

Is the earth really billions of years old?

Video 3: The Origin of Life Could life have come into being by chance?

Video 4: The Origin of Species Can time and chance produce new species?

Video 5: The Origin of Mankind Did man evolve from ape-like ancestors?

Video 6: The Fossil Record Do the earth's geologic strata and fossils prove evolution?

The films will be shown Wednesdays, from October 31 to December 4, 1990 in the Classroom Building, Room C303, from 12:30 to 1:00 P.M. If numbers permit, other dates and times may also be posted later.

Admission is Free

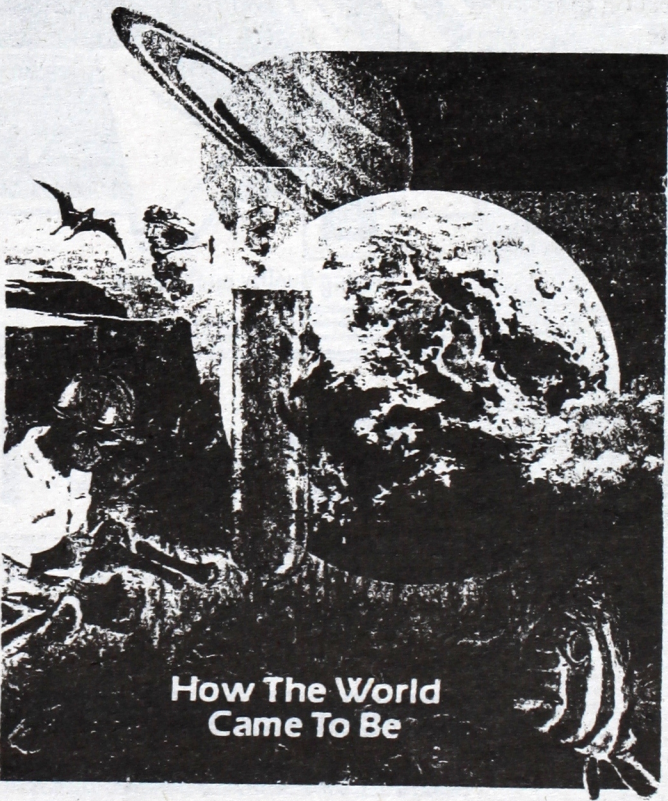

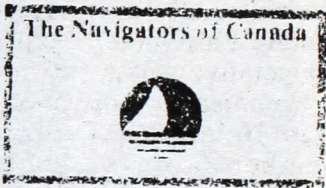

The series features Dr. Arthur E. Wilder-Smith, widely acclaimed as one of the world's most outstanding scientists and an unexcelled spokesman for creationism. He has earned three doctorate degrees in advanced science and has held many distinguished international academic positions. Gifted with an ability to explain the most complex of scientific matters in a manner that lay-people can easily understand, he is the author of over 60 books and scientific articles. A fascinating and convincing authority on why Creation makes more sense than Evolution.

Origins also features appearances by an impressive list of distinguished scientists, including:

Dr. Duane Gish
Dr. Isaac Asimov
Dr. Arthur Chadwick
Dr. John Morris
Dr. Harold Slusher
Dr. Steven Austin
Dr. Thomas Barnes
Dr. Melvin Cook
Dr. W. J. Ouwenel
Dr. Willard Libby
Dr. Gary Parker
Dr. Malcom Bowden
and others.

Don't miss this opportunity to broaden your knowledge of the earth's true origins with new scientific evidence -- evidence that reveals why creation makes more sense than evolution. For more information.
